

The TRUTH About Daycare Workers

Mark Golden Copyright 2006 markleegoldenwriter.com

1. Similar to canine years – each daycare worker’s year is the equivalent seven years of a normal human.
2. When it’s nap time, daycare workers will dig through the Internet, newspaper want ads, soaps, and info-mercials in order to see just how their lives might have been.
3. Plastic forks and spoons can always be washed again and again to be re-used.
4. Workers always start the day praying for good weather, so kids can play outside (Thank God!)
5. Children missing-in-action are REALLY one less thing to worry about.
6. No child ever needs to be in the bathroom THAT LONG!
7. When workers tell kids, “BE QUIET!” what they really mean is... “Shut-up. Because if you listen carefully, you’ll hear evil Chinamen digging thru the earth coming to take you away!”
8. When workers tell kids, "Your parent is here to pick you up". What they really mean is, "One less jewel I gladly give away!" Shutting the front door they mumble "One more down!"
9. When workers tell parents: "Your child did well today!" What they really mean is that "I explained to Billy what would happen to him if he ever tells you what REALLY happened here!"
10. When workers charge money to watch peoples' kids, they are communicating to the parents: This is the ONLY reason your child is here!
11. When children are fed meals it helps ensure them being a repeat customer especially when the food stays down.
12. To a daycare worker a flushing toilet is not necessarily a good sound.
